HINTS AT POLITICS IN PREPAREDNESS

Rabbi Attacks from Pulpit Administration's Defence Policy.

PHONES PRESIDENT JUST BEFORE SERMON

David Starr Jordan, at the Free Synagogue, Derides Possibility of German Aggression.

Dr. Stephen S. Wise, long a friend and ardent supporter of the President, yesterday morning attacked Mr. Wilson's preparedness policy. Speaking from the pulpit of the Free Synagogue on "Peace Preparedness versus Military Preparedness," this attack came a on "Peace Preparedness, versus Military Preparedness," this attack came a few minutes after Dr. Wise talked with the President over the telephone. Both he and Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford University, who preceded him, urged that there was nothing for the United States to fear in so far as outside attack was concerned.

"Difference in judgment from the President of the United States to fear in to be interpreted as criticism," said Dr. Wise. "Mr. Wilson would not have his utterances regarded as oracular and indisputable. Much as we honor and admire the President, we are not to be his blind followers; nor may it be demanded of us that we hold our deepest convictions in abeyance because of a Presidential word. It will yet come to light that the truess friends of the President are they who now dare to point out that he is mistaken; who pray that he may retrieve his step before it is too late.

"The President has, alas! lent the prestige of his great office and of his equally great character to the cause of the Preparedness is of no importance."

"Realed attention to the was as more than as bugsboo. He said: of the Trussian militarism. That was a fithing, he said, that America should not fear.

"The ins not to make reply, theirs but to do and die," he quoted. "This idea of making bodies of men entirely subservient to the will of one man or a few is the thing to be feared. We do not want that kind of citizenship in America, no matter how efficient it was ruled by Boss Tweed and a handful of his satelline, and for another period it was ruled by Boss Tweed and a handful of his satelline, and for another period it was ruled by Boss Tweed and a handful of his satelline, and for another period it was ruled by Boss Tweed and a handful of his satelline, and for another period it was ruled by Boss Tweed and a handful of his satelline, and for another period it was ruled by Boss Tweed and a handful of his satelline. For years the Emptre was come in the time of war. Historians should leave the pages of w to point out that he is mistaken; who pray that he may retrieve his step before it is too late.

"The President has, alas! lent the prestige of his great office and of his equally great character to the cause of military preparedness. If the proposal of the President had been made two

But a world war rages to-day, due to many causes, chiefest among which was the measure asserting that a few hundred military read history with your eyes open. of military preparedness abroad. This, more than any other cause, made war nevitable."
Dr. Wise said that there had been the influence of politics in the declaration of Mr. Wilson that the country should adopt a policy of military prepared-

"No thinking man will be unmindful "No thinking man will be unmindful of the terrible cost which might have been involved in the rresident's taking a position against the military preparedness programme makers," he said. "Who does not know that Mr. Wilson's failure to echo, however hesitatingly, the cries of the militarists would have been seized by a score of office hunting, mischief making Presidential possibilities ready to inflate themselves into the Presidency through preparedness advocacy?

"Let us for the first time in history enter upon a campaign of peace pre-enter upon a campaign of peace pre-paredness. No one great peace pro-gramme has yet been advised. That re-mains to be done. The order of the day the world in the direction of peace preparedness."

Speaking on "The Long Cost of War," Dr. Jordan pointed out that those persons are punished most among the citizens of a nation who had least to do in starting war. He declared that the main cause of the present war was the effort of the "big men" in England, as well as in Germany, who desired to break down the forward march of democracy.

"It was the fear that the Bundesrah would go in the way of the House of Lords that was the cause of the war in Germany," said Dr. Jordan. "There are two arguments against war: First, the taking of blood is wicked, for no war is or can be noble. Secondly, there is the long cost of war to argue against it. "There is no need of further military preparedness. No nation, not even Germany, would make an attack on us—would ever even think of doing it."

Dr. Jordan's Peace Talk Cheered at Cooper Union

A real, dyed-in-the-wool, peace-at-any-price crowd assembled last night at the People's Institute at Cooper Union to hear Dr. David Starr Jordan, chan-cellor of Leland Stanford Univer-sity, talk on "What Does America Fear?"

The crowd liked what he had to say. A real, dyed-in-the-wool, peace-at

It isstened attentively and applied generously. The folk of the institute were with him from start to finish.

Such, however, was not the fortunate lot of S. Stanwood Menken, president of the National Security League, who undertook to speak on preparedness. Indertook to speak on preparedness. There were men present who knew that J. P. Morgan was a member of the league, and before the speaker had advanced midway in his talk he was halted by hecklers, and the name of Morgan was frequently shouted and mumbled. Mr. Menken made friends, however, with his hearers and did his best to answer many questions hardly worthy of the name.

Dr. Jordan explained that as he had never before spoken on the subject never before spoken on the subject "What Does America Fear?" he was likely to make falsehoods and errors but that after he had spoken on it three or four times corrections vould be made.

three or four times corrections would be made.

There was patriotic pride in the house—plenty of it—and the speaker was forced to stop after his first sentence. "America does not fear anything," until the applause subsided.

"The only test of fear," he continued, "is hate, and America doesn't hate anybody. You can't fear a thing without hate. This is the land where hatred dies away. Charles Lamb once said that he hated a certain man, and, being asked what he looked like, replied: "I don't know. I never saw him. I never hated anybody I ever knew."

"America should hate war and fear war and do away with those things that make war."

Wars, he said, were invariably made

Wars, he said, were invariably made slowly in the dark by men holding powers they never earned, and tangled up with it all was the unearned and unmerited privilege of the aristocracy.
Although a pacifist of note, Dr. Jordan would not let an ambitious and "There are so many offers of sham peace," he said, "it is difficult to recognize the real peace. I should like to see the price list before deciding on the acceptance of peace or the maintenance of peace. But if we can get a real peace, offered at a real price, then I say such a deal is the greatest bargain on earth.

Two Things to Expect at Toilet Paper "Sales"

You either don't get enough paper or the paper you do get is very low grade. Of course, the cloak is eight, sometimes ten, rolls for a quarter. When you see such offers examine the quality of the paper.

Yes, the rolls may look big, but the rolls are generally loosely wound to make them look bulky. Demand a standard toilet paper measure—how many sheets in a roll is what should interest you.
